From the Preacher's Desk

By: David Olmos

Thank you!

Six years ago, while sitting at my desk in Ardmore, Oklahoma, I found myself deep in thought, wrestling with a decision I needed to make. We loved our home, our friends, and our work, but being so far from family was difficult for Catherine, especially after the loss of her father. So, I decided to search for congregations in Texas that were hiring. The first and only job posting I found was for the pulpit position at the Angleton Church of Christ in Angleton, Texas. My initial thought, typical for many, was, "Where in the world is Angleton?" After a quick Google search, I realized it was the perfect place for our family. I submitted my application, was invited to visit, and was offered the job shortly after.

I remember telling Catherine we'd be moving, and I felt an overwhelming mix of joy and sadness. I was sad about leaving friends but joyful about the prospect of a new job closer to family. What I don't often share is the fear I felt. It stemmed from a place of worry. What if the members aren't as welcoming as those in Oklahoma? What if we struggle to connect or fit in with the current members? While I know that the context of Psalm 56:11 isn't specifically about the fear of change, I kept reciting this verse: "In God I trust; I shall not be afraid."

When the Olmos family arrived in Angleton, we were greeted with overwhelming love and compassion—more than we had ever experienced. We instantly felt at home and knew everything would be okay. It was going to be great. The Angleton Church of Christ is one of the most loving congregations I have ever encountered. When Catherine and I decided to move from Angleton to San Marcos, it was an incredibly difficult decision. We were leaving behind not only our family and friends but also a job that I was passionate about. Nevertheless, my heart kept pulling me back to central Texas, and I couldn't ignore what I felt God wanted for me. It's never easy for a preacher to leave a congregation on good terms. I also understand how difficult it can be for the congregation to see their preacher go, especially when they wish he could stay. However, I believe God has great things in store for everyone, and I am excited to see what excellent opportunities will arise for a congregation that will always hold a special place in our hearts.

As this is my final bulletin article, I want to express something that will never feel like enough: thank you! Thank you for welcoming my family with open arms. Thank you for tolerating my good and not-so-good ideas for the congregation. Thank you for showing love to my kids, especially Emery, who has only known this church. Our girls will miss you all more than you can ever imagine. I pray that God brings you a strong, conservative, loving, and compassionate preacher who sees what I have seen: Christians eager to do good for the Kingdom! If we never meet again on this side of heaven, I look forward to spending eternity on that beautiful shore that awaits us on the other side. God bless, and once again, thank you!

There will be a Youth Devo this Sunday, 2/9 hosted by the Faycosh family, here at the building!

If you would like to host, there is a sign-up sheet on the back Bulletin board.
